This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Report of the State Librarian.

NASHVILLE, TENN., December 30, 1912.

To the Honorable State Library Commission and Members of the Fifty-eighth General Assembly:

GENTLEMEN: A State Library is a library "By the People, For the People." The name "State Library" carries with it the direct idea of a library dedicated to the service of "The Government and the People of the State." The Tennessee State Library has existed as a separate department of State since 1854. There is no other class of libraries whose field can be so clearly defined, whose character is so unmistakably determined by the special needs of the State, and whose service to the State can be made so comprehensive and economic. The real purpose of the library of the State is (1) to preserve safely, under skilful administration, all matters of historic interest to carry on to posterity; (2) to give, in the Law Library, the books needed by the courts in dispensing justice to all; (3) to provide books needed in their work by the Legislature and various officers and departments; (4) to furnish the best reading to all citizens of the State.

The State Library is bound to be for the State what the national library should be for the nation. The State Library started, probably, in most States, with a conception of a law library for the courts; then some of them added to it historical archives, with the thought that the history of the State should be preserved. The next development was books for the State departments, and that has been slow. Many States yet have not recognized the duty of the State Library to provide the tools for every department of State with which it might do its work best; and it was a much later conception that the State Library was really the library for the whole State, encyclopædic in its character, belonging to all the citizens of the State, and bound to make its rules so that its books might be available to all parts of the State. To meet these requirements came the development of a departmental institution, including departments of Law, Legislative Reference, General Reference, and Extension.

In times past, Tennessee found that the library "By the People, For the People," did not in fact serve the people. It only served the courts, the lawyers, the citizens of Nashville, and the occasional visitor. It is just this condition that has led the library, in her reorganization, to follow the example of some of the most progressive libraries of the country (notably among this number being the State libraries of New York, Virginia, and California). A sincere effort is being made to make the library serve the greatest number of people in the greatest number of ways, with the most efficiency.

This is manifestly the age of reciprocity, co-operation, and unification, and to rely on the authority of Mr. Melvil Dewey, the libraries of the State must as inevitably be brought into some unified system as its educational institutions. The Keystone in this Arch must be the library of the State, not because it is necessarily the largest, or the most progressive, for it may be neither, but because it is the only logical head. It is a self-evident truth that the highest life of the State will be far more effectually stimulated by the intelligent co-operation by the public libraries through some certain medium than by any independent, however zealous, effort on their part.

Reorganization and Cataloging

Up to a generation ago a library was an accumulation of books, generally kept under lock and key, used only by an occasional student, and arranged in the manner most convenient for the librarian, who probably knew the subject matter of the greater number of them. The old library used a printed book catalog, arranged either alphabetically, or by very large subjects, as History, Fiction, or Science. This was possible because new books were not often added to the collection. But with the flood of modern books the present day library finds its catalogue out of date before it is printed. After some years of experiment, debate and consultation, the two great systems now in use in practically all modern libraries both here and abroad, were formally adopted by the American Library Association, the governing body of the library world. That in use by all but the very largest libraries is known as the Dewey Decimal System. Each group or subject has a definite number expressed in Arabic figures, so arranged that a glance shows any particular phase of the subject treated, and its relation to other allied subjects. A knowledge of how to classify and catalogue books is to-day a special branch of library science, requiring a broad, general knowledge, as well as a large amount of technical instruction. It is comparatively easy to keep up a library once it is properly organized according to these principles, as all modern libraries are; but to take an old library, with its accumulation of books, and bring it into agreement with the new system is a more difficult matter. This is the work which is at present being done with the history collection of the State Library. Most of this collection had already been classified, but no alphabetical numbers assigned nor cataloging done in complete form. Moreover, the growth of the collection since first classified compelled a reclassification of many books to place those on minor phases of a larger subject together, this closer classification having been unnecessary in the smaller collection. When this work is finished, it should be possible for any person to find in the catalogue all the books on a desired subject and all those on related subjects; to locate the books on the shelves once a starting point is given, and to return the books to their exact location with no more technical information than a knowledge of the alphabet and the ability to count.

The Librarian, on her side, can determine at a glance whether a given book is in or out, and by the use of a classified file of cards, known as a shelf list, whether any books are missing from her collection. There are two thousand or more volumes in this section, which includes also travel and biography.

Law Department.

The Law Department is becoming more and more a source of usefulness. This department is undergoing a thorough classification. The old form of subject arrangement is being used; author and title cards are being made for each book, and subject cards for all important matter contained therein, which has heretofore been a hidden mass of material. All new books are classified and catalogued under this system, and as time will permit, this system will be applied to former purchases and exchanges. The exchange of laws and law reports is becoming more satisfactory. The States and Territories respond promptly to the tender of exchange, and exchange of our laws with all foreign countries and colonies is being effected. The time is not far off when the State Library exchanges abroad will become general.

We respectfully make the following suggestions with reference to building up the Law Department:

(1) The gaps in the State Reports should be filled. This administration found four hundred and twenty-five State Reports missing from the Library. These Reports in every instance, are very early Reports, and there is no record of them ever having been here. Probably the system of exchange between the States was not then in operation as it is to-day.

As to the suggestion, that of filling gaps in the State Reports, on account of the fact that many of the volumes wanted are out of print and very scarce, it seems to us that the best method would be to set aside a certain sum to be used for this purpose during the years 1913–1914. It also seems to us that we should secure the services of some reputable house to act as our agents in picking up these volumes. This plan has the advantage of enabling our agent to buy quietly, without stimulating the market, and would make the fund determined upon go much further, we believe, than could be done by any other method.

(2) The current set of English Reports which we now have should be brought to date. We should secure a fairly complete digest of the English Reports, and, if possible, secure the early English Reports prior to the current set above mentioned. We have the current set of English Reports from date of publication, 1865, down to and including 1891. We need to fill these out, 1892 to 1912, inclusive, or 105 volumes. These can be supplied in binding uniform with that on our shelves (the official half calf binding) for $472.50 delivered.

Mews' Digest of the English Reports from the earliest period down to and including 1912, in 16 volumes, can be supplied for $96.00.

As to the reports prior to 1865, we have a few scattering volumes only. Our suggestion is that we buy the complete verbatim Annotated Reprint of the regular chronological series of reports prior to 1865 which is now being published. There are now published 138 volumes of the Reprint (there will probably be 150 volumes in the complete set, and are available at the price of $6.00 per volume (138) volumes for $828.00).

The Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama State Libraries are the only State Libraries which are not already taking this Reprint. Georgia and Alabama both have very large collections of the original volumes, and we have previously called your attention to the fact that we have only a few scattering volumes.

(3) The late revisions of the statutes of the various States should be added. Of the late revisions at this time we would suggest the following: Arkansas Statutes, California Statutes, Illinois Statutes (Heard), Indiana Statutes (Burns), Minnesota Code, Missouri Annotated Statutes, New York (Consolidated) Statutes, Ohio (Consolidated) Statutes, Vermont Public Statutes, West Virginia Code Supplement.

The library is at present receiving at regular intervals Federal Reporter; Federal Reporter Digest; Lawyers Reports, Annotated, N. S.; American State Reports and Southwestern Reporter. The Southwestern Reporter, Southeastern, Northwestern, Northeastern, Atlantic, Pacific, and Southern comprise the West Reporter Series. Of this series we have only the Southwestern Reporter.

Our present appropriation of $1,000 per annum is not sufficient to meet our needs. We would suggest that the Law Library appropriation be increased from $1,000.00 per annum to $2,000.00.

Legislative Reference Department.

A branch of library work, the development of which is comparatively recent, is the Legislative Reference Department, whether as a part of State or municipal government. Of course the legislators have always used the library's law collection as some sort of guide in their work, but until recently no attempt has been made anywhere to systematize this material, or to develop the possibilities of its usefulness.

The Librarian has attempted to learn from those concerned what questions are likely to be considered in the approaching session of the Legislature, and gather together all the available material on these subjects, whether in laws of other States, periodical or newspaper articles, books or pamphlets. This material is carefully classified and that on each subject placed together—the clippings and smaller pamphlets in pamphlet boxes plainly labeled, the larger material by the side of the boxes or on easily accessible shelves.

The person who is interested in the Back Tax Question, for example, would find in a well organized department of this sort a compilation of the laws of other States or of foreign countries on this subject, or any important articles from periodicals which might shed light on the best policy to pursue; clippings from the leading papers of the State, or of other States, and books or pamphlets. Both sides of any vexed question will be presented as fully as possible, it being clearly understood that this is not an effort to further any particular measure, but only to furnish the available information on the subjects that the laws passed may be up-to-date, practicable, and constitutional. Our beginning in this work must necessarily be small, but we hope to develop this section in time into the invaluable department it has become wherever such work has been seriously tried.

We have compiled lists of references and material on the following subjects: Charities and Corrections, Child Labor and Woman's Labor, Convict Labor and Criminology, Education, Election Laws, Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation, Forestry, Conservation and Game Laws, Immigration, Initiative, Referendum and Recall; Insurance, Juvenile Courts, Labor and Trade Unions, Liquor Question (Cigarettes, Drugs, etc.), Mines and Mining, Mineral Resources of Tennessee, Municipal Government, Primaries, Public Health, Public Utilities (Railway Regulations, Telephones, Telegraph, Postoffice, Commercial Conditions), Rural Schools and Consolidation of Schools, State Libraries and Free Library Commissions, Taxation, White Slave Traffic, Woman's Suffrage and Legal Rights of Women, Miscellaneous, (Peace Movement, Political Campaigns, Civil Service, Judicial Control, Governors' Messages, County Administration, Cost of Living, Constitutional Revision).

Extension Department.

Up to a generation ago a library was an accumulation of books, generally kept under lock and key, and only used by the occasional student. Medieval librarians in monasteries chained their books to prevent their being taken away from the libraries. The old idea was to keep the books in the library. The new idea is to get the books out of the library. The library was established for the use of books—not merely for their collection and shelving. If we want our books used, we must not prevent their being used by hard and fast rules.

In 1890 New York sent from her State Library the first traveling libraries that were ever operated. Her object was to take the chains off her books, and carry out the new idea of getting the books out of the library. To-day a farmer, no matter what his isolation from centers of culture, if he has the good fortune to live in the State of New York, can have the use all winter of a traveling library sent from the State Library at Albany, and selected with particular attention to the needs of himself and family.

The Michigan State Library quickly followed New York's lead. Now all the most progressive State Libraries are operating traveling libraries.

The Tennessee State Library sent out in 1910 the first traveling libraries ever purchased by State funds and operated by a State Department. To extend library privileges to all is our ultimate purpose. Of course we recognize that the realization of this desire can only come by degrees; so we contrived to have the first step in extension as broad and comprehensive as possible, and conceived the idea of first sending traveling libraries to the county schools. We have a twofold object in so doing. First, we give our attention to the school children, recognizing in them the future citizens of the State, and desiring to make of them—the children of to-day—the reading men and women of to-morrow. We believe that by circulating libraries through the schools, where the teacher becomes the librarian, and is held responsible by the County Superintendent, these books do in fact circulate through the school, and that from the little tots on through the high school the advantage of good books is given. To cultivate right habits of reading in the formative stage is a great problem. The library is valuable to the grown person in proportion to the way he learned as a child how to use it. He is often circumscribed by his own experience, because at the proper time the preparatory stage had been neglected. It follows, therefore, that when children at school are taught how to read, but not what to read, much harm may be done. The child learns how to read in the reading class, but he can not be taught there what to read. It is chiefly through the use of the library that he learns that, if he learns it at all at school, and in the majority of cases he will learn it at school, or not at all.

SET DDD—TRAVELING LIBRARIES FOR COUNTY SCHOOLS

The primary purpose of the public school is to make good citizens, and no other subject taught in school contributes so much to that end as reading, provided the pupils are trained to read good books. In life we must associate to a large extent with all classes of people, good and bad. Through reading we may know only the best. In school, children should be so trained that they will choose the best company all through their lives, so far as they associate with people through their reading. This is the work of the school library. This is a work that can be done in every school that has a few well chosen books. Most children will read, and it rests largely with the school to determine what kind of reading they will do. No greater, no more important and far-reaching work can be done in school than this. The work of the extension department of the State Library is to aid in this task, and nothing that it can do to assist in this important work will be left undone.

The second object in operating traveling school libraries is to reach the adult members of the family through the child. The teacher gives these books to the child to take home, and we know they take them home, and they are eagerly read by the adult members of the family as well as by the children themselves. All reports coming to us tell the same story: "The books are eagerly read, both by old and young."

The purpose of the traveling school library is not to supercede, but to supplement, the permanent library, and to go into the schools and communities where there are no permanent libraries and arouse the desire for books that will lead to the establishment of permanent libraries. The General Educational Bill of 1909 enables the State Library to circulate traveling libraries in county schools, but provides, first, for the establishment of permanent libraries. The scheme by which the travelling school libraries are operated is both simple and comprehensive. On application of the County Superintendent the State Library will send to each county one or two sets of traveling libraries. There are six libraries in each set, and fifty volumes in each library. The libraries are made up of picture books, and books of simple little rhymes and jingles; then little nature studies, easy reading, etc., for the primary grades. Then nature, geography, description, travel, history, biography and general literature for the primary grades through the high school.

When the schools are closed the County Superintendent is further obligated to place these libraries in the homes of any responsible person, a church, drug store, or any place he may desginate, provided that the library remains open to the community, the community providing someone to act as librarian.

The popularity of the traveling libraries continues as shown by extracts from the following letters:

"The books have been widely read, both by old and young. We are returning Set G. Please let us have a new set at your earliest convenience. (Signed) "G. C. HARVILL,
"County Supt., Hickman Co."

"Your traveling school libraries are doing a great work, which can be in no way estimated. In the first place, they are made up of well selected books, suitable for all the grades from the first up. I have looked personally into the records to see what use is being made of the books in the various schools, and find they are being sought and read eagerly by the children and their parents. I have been impressed with the number of volumes taken out, and the number of volumes read by the individual child. This cultivates the reading habit (and the habit's value can ont be over-estimated), together with a taste for good literature in the children of the rural districts where it is most needed. Instead of housing the books up to be read by an occasional visitor, they go in this way into the homes of the people, whom they should benefit. With your arrangement of no two sets alike, three hundred volumes can within a short time be brought within the reach of the community. Safeguarded by your rules these books can not be lost or worn out until they have accomplished an untold amount of good. I know of no money more wisely expended by the State than that invested in the traveling school libraries. (Signed) "D. O. DONNELL,

"County Supt., Fayette Co."

"The libraries that you sent us were eagerly sought for by our teachers, and my only regret is that we were unable to supply the demand. The books are of a character that is highly pleasing to the children, a great many of whom have never known what a child's book really is. These books are so well adapted to the grades for which they are intended, that the child will readily acquire the reading habit.

"If we could only have enough books to supply a library to each school, it would greatly enforce the work of the school, and at the same time lessen the work of the child.

"We greatly appreciate the interest you are taking in placing readable books within the reach of our boys and girls who could get them in no other way." (Signed) "JOE ROUTEN,
"County Supt., Henry Co."

"The libraries have had a splendid effect on the schools in this county. We have not had this set very long, and if it suits you, we will keep these through the summer. I hope we can get some more soon. (Signed) "M. D. ALLEN,
"County Supt., Carter Co."

"We have had one of the traveling libraries in our school about two months, and I find that it has been read and reread about 180 times. Our school averages about forty pupils. I find that the books for the first, second, third and fourth grades are read more than the books for the higher grades, one book being read as much as ten times. (Signed) "WM. L. FOSTER,
"Edgemont, Anderson Co."

"The circulating library furnished our school through Superintendent A. C. Duggins has been of much value to our school and community. Considering the library as one book, it has been read no less than three hundred times.

(Signed) "A. C. JOHNSON,
"Briceville, Anderson Co."

"The traveling library at our school contains fifty volumes on various subjects. These books have all been read a number of times—teachers, pupils, and patrons have become interested and are reading them. It would be hard to estimate the value of the library to the community. (Signed) "J. F. COX,
"Scarborough, Anderson Co."

"I can not express to you in words what libraries, both traveling and stationary, have done and are doing for Anderson County. Many boys and girls in this mountain section do not get a square deal. To such these good books are silent teachers, getting in their work in the solitude of home, and during the quiet hours of night, when there are no external influences to interfere. Thousands have received a taste for good literature that will grow and manifest itself in a more perfect citizenship in the future. (Signed) "A. C. DUGGINS,
"County Supt., Anderson Co."

"I wish to commend to all teachers and school people the traveling school library. It has worked well in my county and such an interest has been manifested in the books that it would require three or four such sets to supply the demand. Not only the children seem to be deeply interested in the books, but the patrons as well. I wish to thank you for your loyal support in this department of the school work.

(Signed) "MONROE W. WILSON,
"County Supt., Knox Co."

"The six libraries which you sent me have been received, and I am very much pleased with them. I have already sent them out, and the teachers are anxious for them for their schools. I am specially pleased with the quality of books selected.

(Signed) "J. M. HATFIELD,
"County Supt., Putnam Co."

"As my teachers are so well pleased with Library F, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, we are counting on keeping the six libraries circulating through our schools. Can't you send me right away another set of six libraries? I can use them very advantageously, and hope to receive them soon. (Signed) "FRED J. PAGE,
"County Supt., Williamson Co."

TENNESSEE STATE LIBRARY

TENNESSEANA.

All Tennessee matter is grouped by itself. This arrangement has proved satisfactory in every way. Our collection of Tennesseana, though far from complete, is probably larger than any similar collection.

We are especially desirous of having as complete a set as it is now possible to obtain of the documents of the several Departments of State, of the cities of the State, and of the publications of the educational institutions of the State. We recommend that a bill be introduced in the coming General Assembly to the following effect: That, where there are enough duplicate copies of the publications of the Departments of State, of the cities of the State, and of the educational institutions in stock, in possession of the Departments of State, or the cities or institutions, the State Library be immediately supplied with a set of them, and that in the case of future publications it shall be the duty of the State officials, the clerk of the city councils, or some other official, and the head of the institution, to send volume or volumes of the publications to the State Library, on penalty of a fine for failure.

It is appropriate that there should be a full collection of such material in the State Library. This would be of great advantage to Departments of State, to each of the cities and institutions concerned, that there should be at least one complete set of its printed documents in case of destruction by fire of its own set.

You will find appended to this report a complete catalogue of our collection of Tennesseana.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE STATE LIBRARY.

State Library Bulletins Nos. 1 and 2 (Extension Department) were published this year. Also book lists on the following subjects:

Birds,
College Stories for Girls,
How to Make and Do Things,
Labor Problems,
Questions of the Day,
Sea Tales,

Some of the Best Volumes of Short Stories,
Stories to Read Aloud,
The Home and its Interests,
The Trust Problem.

The Staff of the Library

The staff of the library remains the same as it was in 1882. At that time there was a Librarian and an Assistant Librarian. In thirty-one years the work of the library has increased more than threefold, but the number of the staff remains the same. The work in every department of the library is being roughly administered, and this condition will confront you until the staff is increased sufficiently to take care of the volume of work that is now being done in the library. We call your attention to the urgent need of a Second Assistant Librarian. We also call your attention to the very small salaries that are at present being drawn by the Librarian and the Assistant Librarian. The Tennessee State Library has a smaller staff and pays smaller salaries than almost any State Library in the union.

Inter-Library Loan System.

The Virginia State Library has a very splendid Inter-Library Loan System. The mutual benefits to be derived from an association of library interests is most apparent. The greatest problem confronting librarians in the South is where to locate such information as is necessary for them to furnish in order to maintain a standard of usefulness to their respective communities, and the liability to open such channels to the public is primarily responsible for library inactivity in Tennessee. So we ask that an "Inter-Library Loan System" may be inaugurated, after Virginia's plan. We ask that the books of the main library be allowed to circulate under strict regulations. The Inter-Library Loan System is to be operated between the State Library and all other libraries of the State who may desire to participate in the benefits to be derived from this system. Public libraries, school libraries, etc., to borrow books from the State library, on the promise that they will lend us any of their books which we may desire to use. These books to be allowed to remain away from the library for a period of two weeks, and then if no other borrower has called for them here by the end of the two weeks, are allowed to be retained for a second period of two weeks. The borrower to pay cost of carriage each way.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

We recommend that our present appropriation of $2,000.00 biennially for the Law Library be raised to $4,000.00, to be expended under the direction of the Supreme Court and the State Attorney-General.

We recommend a continuation of the appropriation of $2,000.00 biennially for the general library, to be expended under the direction of the Library Commission.

We recommend a continuation of the very generous appropriation for traveling libraries, which comes to us through the General Educational Bill of 1909.

We ask for a Second Assistant Librarian.

We recommend that an Inter-Library Loan System may be established, so that the books of the main library be allowed to circulate under strict regulations.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY SKEFFINGTON,
State Librarian.
